Attanasio, A.A. Killing with the Edge of the Moon
Model 34500
Wildside Press: - Rockville: - 2006 - 201 First edition, TPBO, Trade paperback, New,  A.A. Attanasio writes like nobody you've ever read. Wild, peculiar, highly lyrical and poetic writing. The sounds that the words make in your brain will please you and you'll find his stories compelling and charged with emotion. He's amazing and we suggest you check him out. "The speaker is a hickory-faced crone trying to explain to Chet, a shy kid with eyeglasses and pocket protector, why he can't take her granddaughter to the high school dance. For quiet, elfin Flannery is not like other kids. A living Blud-eye-eth, she has caught the attention of the faerie, beautiful evil creatures from a mysterious Otherworld, who seduce their victims with moonlight raves before feeding them to a dragon and hunting souls with a supernatural black dog of prodigious evil. And they have taken Flannery for one of their own. And she won't be going to the school dance-not unless Chet rescues her."
